

Fashion | By Lauren Sullivan | 02 March 2022, 5:05pm

Netflix Hit “Inventing Anna” Has Us In Love With These Designer Lux Looks

Julia Garner is dressed to the nines wearing a variety of designers as she plays convicted felon Anna Sorokin in Shonda Rhimes’ “Inventing Anna”

SHARE

TWEET

The incredible costume designers Lyn Paolo and Laura Frecon worked for months curating the incredible and luxurious wardrobe for the cur-rent top ten most watched show in the United States, “Inventing Anna”, produced by Shonda Rhimes. “Inventing Anna” tells the story of how con woman Anna “Delvey” Sorokin scammed some of the biggest busi-nesses and people of New York; Anna played by Julia Garner successful-ly depicts how Sorokin fooled everyone into believing she was a German Heiress through her expensive chic fashion.

Although Sorokin is not one to look up to, her luxurious and design-er style is one many people want to emulate. Shonda Rhimes and Lyn Paolo worked tirelessly at piecing together and organizing the exact pieces Anna wore while she attempted to portray this high status image. She was successful in the sense that she looked the part, and fit in with the people around her. She knew how to look like she belonged on any oc-cassion. Paolo was not a huge fan of Sorokin’s style so she felt she needed to elevate the looks slightly for the show. However, the designer items featured in the show are real and Paolo was very specific in creating pieces that illustrated the right feeling or vibe based on the setting and situational context. The designers say it took them about three months to source all the pieces, and they had to “become detectives” by digging through Anna’s instagram.

Aaron Epstein/Netflix

The show features numerous designers including Dior, Oscar de la Renta, Celine, Alexander Wang and many more. Although Sorokin could not be successful in scamming the system, she did know how to look good while trying.